Tropical Cyclone Rusty – Preparations underway to resume production

Millennium Minerals Limited provides an update on mine operations following tropical cyclone Rusty. Millennium operates the Nullagine Gold Project located approximately 250 km inland from Port Hedland in the Pilbara region.

Although the centre of the cyclone passed close to the mine during Thursday morning all safety alerts have now been lifted. The mine, process plant and infrastructure did not experience any material damage from wind or rainfall and preparations are underway to resume production.

About Millennium Minerals

Millennium Minerals Limited operates the Nullagine Gold Project, located in the Pilbara Region in Western Australia. The Project comprises 7 deposits on granted mining leases. The largest deposit, Golden Eagle, is located approximately 10 km south of the township of Nullagine. The 1.5 Mtpa CIL process plant was commissioned at the end of 2012 and first gold was poured in September 2012. Commercial production was declared at the start of February 2013.
