

VIRGIN AUSTRALIA GROUP OPTIMISES INTERNATIONAL NETWORK

- Tigerair Australia launches internationally
- Virgin Australia withdraws from underperforming short-haul international routes
- Virgin Australia increases capacity to New Zealand and the Pacific

7 August 2015

The Virgin Australia Group today announced plans to optimise its international network to deliver improved fleet utilisation and meet customer demand on key trans-Tasman and short-haul international routes.

Tigerair Australia:

The Tigerair Australia brand will launch in the short-haul international market with Denpasar (Bali) as its first international destination to enable the Group to better cater to the changing dynamics in the region.

From 23 March 2016, Tigerair Australia will use three all economy configured Boeing 737-800 aircraft to offer the following services to Denpasar (Bali), subject to relevant regulatory and operational approvals being secured:

- Adelaide-Denpasar: five return services per week
- Melbourne-Denpasar: daily return services
- Perth-Denpasar: daily return services

Members of Virgin Australia's loyalty program Velocity Frequent Flyer will be able to redeem Velocity Points for seats on Tigerair Australia services to Denpasar.

Virgin Australia route withdrawals:

From 23 March 2016, Virgin Australia will withdraw from the following routes:

- Adelaide-Denpasar: five return services per week
- Melbourne-Denpasar: daily return services
- Perth-Denpasar: eight return services per week

The last flights on these routes will operate on 22 March 2016.

From 1 February 2016, Virgin Australia will withdraw from the Perth-Phuket route, with the last flight operating on 31 January 2016.

These changes will be effective in Virgin Australia's booking system from 10am AEST today, Friday 7 August 2015. Customers who have already booked on these services for travel after the last flights will be contacted by their travel provider with alternative options.

Virgin Australia will continue to operate to Denpasar from Sydney, Brisbane and Port Hedland.

Virgin Australia route increases:

From 25 October 2015 onwards, Virgin Australia will increase capacity into New Zealand, in conjunction with our alliance partner Air New Zealand. Virgin Australia will also increase capacity to Fiji and the Solomon Islands to meet customer demand.

These increases represent more than 52,000 additional seats on trans-Tasman and Pacific routes during the 2016 financial year.
