PIONEERING LAWFUL CANNABIS GENETICS

In response to recent approaches from other Australian medical Cannabis researchers and companies, Medical Cannabis Limited (MCL) has received advice from the Federal Office of Drug Control (ODC) advising that MCL would be allowed to licence its cultivars to other Australian medical Cannabis companies, producers and manufacturers. This means that aside from its own cultivation and research plans, MCL is now able to legally supply and partner with other serious Australian and international medical Cannabis companies and researchers seeking to secure Australian foundation seed stock and genetics from MCL's unique advanced Australian seed bank.

The Narcotics Act and ODC regulations require Australian companies applying to cultivate medical Cannabis to either import from an internationally recognised source, or seek Australian supply avenues. Due to MCL's uniquely advanced Australian seed bank, MCL is now able to be a needed supplier to these companies and researchers thus placing itself in a position to be able to benefit commercially from such partnerships.

MCL is already growing several of its Cannabis genotypes for investigation and breeding in the low THC Cannabis arena. As we have previously advised, a selection of MCL's varieties will be on public display in a purpose built grow room at the Sydney Health Hemp and Innovation Expo at Rosehill Racecourse on 28th May this year.

In addition, MCL is also in the process of significantly expanding its activities in relation to site location, facility type and strategy options in a way that complies with its obligations under the permits received and further applied for.

The technical director of MCL, Andrew Kavasilas, said, "We have had many offers of large areas of land for our further planned growing purposes. We are also intending to shortly secure an additional large indoor growing facility closer to Sydney which can provide even more security. We are seeking maximum area in the expectation that we will be a major supplier to the medical Cannabis industry globally"
