September review

Financial markets were relatively quiet during September. Global share markets, as measured by the MSCI All Country World Index, increased by 0.4% during the month in US$ terms, or fell by 0.2% if measured in A$ terms. US equities continued their outperformance over global shares markets, rising by 0.6%, while Japanese equities recorded the most noteworthy move during the month, increasing by 6.2%.

Reflecting the continuing strength of the US economy, the US Federal Reserve raised interest rates by 0.25% during September, their third interest rate rise this year. The strength of the US economy and its capital markets relative to the rest of the world has been one of the most powerful themes for markets this year. Year-to-date, US share markets have returned 10.6%, considerably outperforming global share markets, which have risen by 3.8%, and Chinese shares markets, which have fallen by 12.4%. The large differential in the equity market returns of the US and China is particularly noteworthy in the context of the escalating trade tensions between the two countries. The Trump administration, perhaps sensing that its unconventional approach to addressing Chinese trade practices is working, announced it would impose tariffs on a further US$200Bn of Chinese imports during the month.

GVF entered one new trade during September, acquiring a large stake in a fund that will soon enter liquidation. We exited one of our smaller holdings at an attractive level and recorded a notable uplift on another via a corporate action that allowed us to realise the majority of our investment above its carrying value. These gains were more than offset however, by modest discount widening on several other holdings. We remain confident in the ultimate catalysts for these investments and will use any sustained pull back in their prices to add to our positions.

For some time now GVF has run with a relatively low underlying exposure to global equity markets. While we do not pretend to be able to predict the future direction of financial markets, after a nine-year uninterrupted equity bull market our conviction that compelling risk-adjusted returns can be readily found in share markets today is low. Moreover, we believe the success of our strategy turns on our ability to unlock value from a broad range of different asset classes, and we continue to find a range of exciting opportunities for the fund that should have a low correlation to broader share market returns. At the end of September, GVF's see through equity market exposure was 24%, one of the lowest levels of equity market exposure we have had since launch.

The investment portfolio decreased in value by 0.5% during September. The fund's discount capture strategy detracted 0.3% from returns during the month, while adverse currency movements reduced returns by a further 0.3%. The remaining attribution of returns are accounted for by positive returns from the fund's underlying market exposures and the Company's operating costs.

A list of the Global Value Fund's current top five holdings is shown on the following page, along with a breakdown of the fund's underlying currency and asset class exposures. The fund was 103.7% invested at the end of September.

It is the Board's intention to pay regular dividends so long as the Company is in a position to do so.

Investment Manager

The portfolio management team is based in London and has considerable experience in finding international assets trading at a discount to their intrinsic value and in identifying, or creating, catalysts to unlock this value.
