SFE SPI 200™ Index Futures Contract Expiry – Market Information Update

As market users will be aware, the September 2008 expiry of the SFE SPI 200™ Index Futures contract takes place on Thursday, 18 September 2008 at 12:00 noon. The settlement price for this contract is drawn from the Special Opening Quotation of the underlying S&P/ASX 200 Index, which in turn is derived from the first traded price in each component stock in this Index on the contract's Last Trading Day.

SFE recognises that the current global markets situation has coincided with the expiry of the September contract and that this addition to normal trading activity has led to large positions being accumulated. Traders have advised the Exchange that they may seek to reduce their exposures by permitting futures positions to expire and by trading out of physical equities during the opening auction on the day of expiry. As a result, SFE wishes to advise traders that these market activities have the potential to lead to a much larger level of order entry activity being observed in physical equity transactions during Thursday's ASX opening price auction than is usually the case. This could lead to increased levels of final-day volume and price volatility in combination with those being brought about by the precipitation of current global events on the Australian domestic market – traders who are unwilling to accept this price risk may look to exit positions before this.

As part of its market operator licence which imposes front-line market supervisory authority and obligations to ensure that its markets are fair, orderly and transparent, Exchange Surveillance personnel monitor trading activity and holdings approaching expiry, and initiate contact with relevant parties to gain adequate assurance as to traders' intentions and understanding of their obligation to trade in a manner consistent with the fair, orderly and transparent operation of SFE's markets. As a result of a number of such discussions in recent days, the Exchange has gained assurances regarding traders' intentions and strategies in meeting these obligations.

SFE wishes to remind SPI 200™ Index Futures traders who are also active in ASX equity markets that they should comply with all rules and relevant guidance regarding trading on those markets, especially through the expiry process.
