- Expected global launch in the coming months

Applabs Technologies (ASX code: ALA) is pleased to announce it is to launch a new mobile photo sharing application called Snaptic. The application will provide users with the ability to capture moments and events overtime in a new random and exciting way. The comprehensive mobile application is envisaged to be fully integrated with Facebook, Instagram and Twitter, allowing the user to upload photos direct from the Snaptic application to existing social media networks.

As part of the marketing strategy, Applabs is well advanced in attracting several international celebrities who will promote the application through their current social media networks. Targeted social media advertising will also be conducted to promote and attract users to Snaptic. Applabs will keep the market informed when agreements have been reached.

Snaptic

Applabs Managing Director Stuart Kidd commented:

“We are very excited to release Snaptic to the market over the coming months and launch a mobile application which we believe will resonate with the younger demographic. Given the globalised commonality for social media based photo applications worldwide, we believe Snaptic offers users something new and exciting, while being delivered in a novel way”
