“Unlike Netflix or any other VOD alternative, TARA offers a high level of personalised niche content,” said Nick Fitzgerald, Executive Chairman of TV2U. “It’s all about giving the subscriber what they want, when and where they want it, and on any device they choose. Our alliance with Sunfly is a key strategic market play for alternative personalized on demand content and entertainment, it is just one offering of the many TARA will offer customers for their enjoyment.”

The enormous subscriber numbers in Asia to standalone karaoke providers is illustrated by Chinese based online karaoke company Changba. Changba has had 140 million registered users since its launch less than two years ago, and has 40 million monthly active and 6 million daily active subscribers.

The Agreement will provide TV2U the opportunity for significant uplift to its OTT (Over the Top) managed service revenue model for both the B2B and B2C markets. The uplift is expected to come from agreed content sales and advertising revenue sharing and the additional services provision for customers. The delivery of the low cost of the service, coupled with attractive upfront content acquisition costs, allow for maximum revenue potential for this transaction and service roll out.

The partnership with Sunfly is one of many contracts the company is working on with its aim being to become one of the largest global premium entertainment OTT service providers.

TV2U is developing a strong mix of content partners to complement its innovative technology solution enabling new operators too rapidly and cost effectively enter the television market place.
