Lifespot Health is pleased to announce it has completed discussions and signed an MOU with Seng Vital Germany to form JV company Seng Vital Australia to integrate the company's vaporizer known as Cannamed into the BodyTel platform. LSH will receive 50% of newly formed Seng Vital Australia and provide services in the final development of the Cannamed device. When Seng Vital Australia moves to full production and market entry, LSH will receive ongoing revenue via subscription services through its SaaS model.

The Global Cannabis market is currently valued at US$50 Bn and growing with an estimated 600,000 patients currently receiving treatment. Of the two well-known methods of cannabis consumption by inhalation, the vaporizer delivery method is deemed to have fewer health concerns than the traditional combustion process or smoking. Vaporizing also provides the means for controlled delivery of cannabis to the user.

Where Cannamed will differ from others is compliance where BodyTel will monitor not only the consumption of Cannabis both in dosage and time of use but also provide additional clinical security via feedback in the form of a finger print scanner to determine the identity of the user is considered a world's first. The BodyTel system will then analyse and present information to carers be they clinicians, support services or family members via the iOS, android or web portal formats.

The developed IP around user compliance will be the licensed to LSH for global use in products other than Cannamed and will be far reaching as other products venture from being standalone to the e-health sector.

One such sector is the management of compliance with regards to Asthma and associated diseases that affect 500M people globally that if managed correctly could save $19 Bn annually in the USA alone according to Goldman Sachs.
