Tuesday, 2 October 2018 – Leading medical cannabis company AusCann Group Holdings Limited (ASX:AC8) (AusCann or 'the Company') is pleased to advise it has today released a series of online courses for Australian health professionals, as a part of its Medical Outreach Program.

AusCann committed early to an outreach program to support Australian medical practitioners and health professionals with the necessary information to confidently make decisions regarding use of cannabinoid medicines.

Dr Danial Schecter, a Canadian clinician with expertise gained from working in the Canadian medical cannabis market and managing his own cannabinoid medical clinics, was appointed AusCann's Chief Medical Advisor in June 2017. The Company subsequently appointed three medical liaison managers (MLMs) to build the outreach team to provide guidance and information to the medical community. Combined, the MLM team has nearly 50 years of experience in the health sector and its managers have worked in senior roles with some of the world's leading pharmaceutical companies.

The online courses represent the latest component of AusCann's outreach program, developed with the assistance of Dr Schecter and experts in online pedagogical resources, as well as input from AusCann's Chairman, Dr Mal Washer.

"It is essential that Australian doctors are informed about the endocannabinoid system and cannabinoid therapeutics so that they can make informed decisions regarding treatment possibilities. Until it becomes part of the medical syllabus, there is a need to provide accessible, referenced, objective information about cannabinoid medicines that doctors and other health professionals can draw upon to inform their thinking," Dr Washer said.

The online courses were launched today under the Medical Portal on AusCann's website. Link to access the portal: <https://www.auscann.com.au/medical-portal.html>
